the terrible and often unknown difficulties with which they were confronted at the outbreak of war. It is inconceivable that Pitt could have drawn such a picture in the darkest hour of his country's fortunes. Mr. Lloyd George, however, with all his ability, is not a Pitt, and the public is now beginning to understand, though not to excuse, his faux pas. The French appreciate, better than the English, the Celtic temperament, and that is, perhaps, the reason why the speech has been treated more kindly by the French than by the English newspapers. THE BAKERY TRADE ARBITRATION.

Evidence was given yesterday afternoon at the arbitration proceedings at the Mansion House, presided over by Mr. Henry Hanna, K.C. (the arbitrator), on behalf of the employers in the Dublin bakery trade dispute. The witnesses examined were Mr. Peter Kennedy, Mr. Monks, Mr. Banks (on behalf of the D.B.C.), Sir Joseph Downes, Mr. Rourke, Mr. Mooney, and Mr. O'Donoghue (on behalf of Bolands, Ltd.). There was a prolonged discussion on the feasibility of establishing a minimum wage for certain classes of workmen, and the employers' evidence in reference to the wages question was completed. This afternoon at 4.30 o'clock the arbitration proceedings will be resumed, when the question will be taken up of an eight hours day, Sunday labour, and other variations that are claimed by the workmen in the conditions of labour.

NAVAL INCIDENT OFF THE BELGIAN COAST.

Wireless news from Berlin, transmitted through the wireless station of the German Get vernment, contains the following official report. In the afternoon of November 12 a shor artillery engagement took place off the Flander coast between German torpedo boats and English Advanced patrol forces, as a result of which one enemy destroyer was hit. The German boats returned to port undamaged.

The Admiralty announces, with reference to the above official report, that on November 18 some German torpedo boat destroyers came out from under the protection of their shore batteries, and fired a few rounds at our patrol vessels, none of which were hit. The fire was promptly returned, and the Germans promptly retired under the protection of their shore batteries, and our patrol was resumed. Incidents of this nature occur daily, and in no way inherfere with the maintenance and efficiency of our patrol, and they are, therefore, not reported.

present. A large factor said vesterdly that trade was beginning to settle down again before the change was announced, and recalled that at this time last year potatoes were being sold at £11 to £12 per ton.

Whilst flying over a South Yorkshire town yesterday two officers of the Royal Flying Corps—Lieutenant Dymford Phillips (24) and Second Lieutenant John William Barr (18)—lost their lives, the machine suddenly crashing to the ground and catching fire.

Gustav Rocketers, a German sailor, who escaped from Leigh Camp on November 124, was recaptured yesterday.

These children of ours will know that behind them stands a united people which regards them as its saviours. There are their homes, their families, their sources of fruitful labour, their liberty, and their dignity—in a word, Italy! Our soldiers have responded with a joyful cry to the call of those of our brothers whose lands have been abandoned before the approach of the pestilence. Signor Orlando announced that a High Commissioner had been appointed for dealing with the cases of refugees from Venetis. He pointed out that the Ministerial crisis, occurring at the same time as the enemy is invasion, demanded, above all, a very speedy solution. He added—The Government is fully alive to the gravity of the hour, and desires there should be, without delay, a full and an exhaustive discussion of the situation. But at the present moment, when we are still being pressed and menaced by the enemy invasion, it is necessary to act rather than to talk. We saw the opportunity of establishing immediately closer contact with our Allies; but, rapid as was our decision in this matter, it is gratifying for us to say it was anticipated. not think that the Committee should, without the strongest reason, upset the arrangements that had been come to by those who framed the bill.

General Sir IVOR PHILIPPS said that the important statement of the Chancellor of the Exchequer had entirely altered his view of the bill. It would have been much better if the Government had been more open with the House, and told them, on the second reading, what had been done. The important thing was the declaration of the right hon, gettleman that the whole of the Air Service was to be handed over to the new Ministry.

Sir HFNRY NORMAN confessed that he still remained unsatisfied. He failed to see why the obligations on the part of the Army and Navy to hand ever their Air Services should not be put in the bill. ing missed the opportunity of taking post of the capital.

Mr. PRINGLE proposed that any person who was contracting with the Government for aeroplanes or engines should be prohibited from sitting on the Air Council.

Major BAIRD said that if the amendment were accepted, two men who had rendered greater service to aviation than any other two living men, would be unable to serve on the Air Council.

Major-General Sir IVOR PHILIPPS protested against anyone serving on the Air Council who was interested in firms to whom orders would be given.

Colonel GRETTON said that he could not support the principle of appointing men to the Air Council who were connected with firms entered appointed in the manufacture of aeroplanes.

Mr. PRINGLE said that two gentlemen were appointed on the present Air Board who were directly interested in factories producing aeroplanes. He wanted to prevent that in the future. Expert advice could be got by other means.

Major BAIRD denied that he had laid down any new principle. He said that he announced the present policy in the House six months ago. In view of the strong opinions that had been expressed, however, he undertook to reconsider the matter before the Report stage.

A CHRONICLE OF PROGRESS AND POSSIBILITIES.

MISCELLANEOUS ITEMS.

The east corner of Moore street, particularly, makes a good impression on the eye.

A recent inquiry in regard to the supply of lithophone, used as a substitute for white lead in the painting trade, did not bring forth very encouraging information, or lead to a hope that supplies of lithophone would be soon available in greater abundance. Supplies are running out, and the position in the trade is somewhat serious, as the use of white lead is comewhat serious, as the use of white lead is officially prohibited. PLASTERING AS AN ART.

NOVEL WALL CONSTRUCTION.

One would think that the construction of walls does not give much scope for ingenuity, but that is far from being the case. It was stated recently that whatever improvements have been effected in other components of a building walls have remained much as they were in the times of those grest builders, the Romans, and dependence upon thickness is necessary to secure warmth in view of the porosity of bricks, and to secure strength, also. Upon the introduction of reinforced concrete it was thought that all difficulties were solved, but a tendency was discovered for the reinforcing bars to become displaced from their proper positions, and the use of such construction became limited to certain functions. Another attempt to overcome drawbacks was made by building walls of concrete blocks, but the result was not fully satisfactory, as the 'key' to the reinfering required to make the wall weather-proof was rather uncertain. For ordinary dwellings, at any rate, the old-style brick or atons wall, with all its faults, held its position, but the demands of war and dearth and cost of certain materials directed attention once more to the use of new methods, and economical ones. The latest type of wall to be submitted to the investigation of builders is one which consists of a core of clinker or concrete blocks, or hollow blocks, to which, on the outer surface, reinforcing bars are attached by means of "stirrups." The outer surface is then rendered with cement mortar, and as an additional precaution the wall may be treated with a waterproofing compound, though experience has proved, it is said, that with good sand, well mixed with the cement, a waterproofing compound is unnecessary. Several distinct claims are made for this wall construction, which is patented. It is claimed that displacement of the reinforcing roda cannet occur, and that the yound is unnecessary. Several distinct claims are made for the said as a several distinct claims are made for the said to be very great, a time of the reinforci

RASPBERRIES. RAMSAY, BALLSBRIDGE. DIGESTION MADE EASY.

One of the most prevalent of modern allments is known as indigestion. Its attendant miseries are only too familiar, but sufferers are often unaware of the causes of the trouble. Many people, in these days, are unable to live what may be termed a sufficiently careful life. Sedentary occupations abound; overwork is on the increase; worries and anxieties multiply. These and other adverse conditions do not permit the digestive system multiply. These and other adverse condi-tions do not permit the digestive system to perform its work with the requisite regularity and efficiency. The result is that the waste products of digestion are not effectively eliminated. Hence acidity, flatulence, billiousness, headache, depression of spirits, and many wretched symptoms. The trouble does not always end here; there is always the danger of the sufferer becoming a chronic dyspeptic with a diges-tive system so impaired as to be unequal-to the work necessary for the maintenance
